

Contributors

Terry Barrett terry.barrett@ucd.ie, TerryBarrett500@hotmail.com is a lecturer in education development at the Teaching and Learning Centre, School of Education and Lifelong Learning in University College Dublin. She also works as an education development consultant specialising in Problem-based Learning. Her current research focuses on illuminative concepts for understanding students' lived experience of Problem-based Learning.

Ellen Breen ellen.breen@dcu.ie is the Head of Information and Public Services at Dublin City University Library. She is the chairperson of the CONUL (Consortium of National and University Libraries) Working Group on Information Skills. Their report on information literacy is available at www.conul.ie. She is a member of the executive committee of the All Ireland Society for Higher Education (AISHE).

Brian Bowe brian.bowe@dit.ie is a member of the academic staff in the Dublin Institute of Technology (DIT) Learning and Teaching Centre and also lectures in the School of Physics. He led the staff team that designed, developed, implemented and evaluated the Problem-based Learning physics course and won the DIT President's Team Award for Teaching Excellence in 2003.

Deirdre Campion deirdre.campion@ucd.ie qualified as a veterinarian from University College Dublin in 1985, and spent a number of years working in private practice before returning to work to UCD. She has a particular interest in fostering lifelong learning, and was part of the team that introduced PBL to veterinary education in Dublin. She currently acts as Coordinator of the Veterinary Medicine programme.

Conor Carroll conor.carroll@ul.ie is a Junior Lecturer in Marketing at the University of Limerick. He has written over 30 published marketing case studies, and has won both national and international awards for his case study writing. Conor is the winner of the Teaching Excellence Award at the University of Limerick for his teaching activities within the University.

Deirdre Connolly connoldm@tcd.ie is a lecturer in the School of Occupational Therapy, Trinity College Dublin. She has been designing and tutoring Problem-based Learning for the last six years. Her current research focuses on the application of knowledge and skills acquired through Problem-based Learning in clinical practice.

Alison Clancy alison.clancy@ucd.ie is a lecturer in the School of Nursing, Midwifery and Health Systems at University College Dublin. Her current research is in the area of enhancers, impediments and sustainability issues of a PBL curriculum.

Declan Delaney decland@cs.nuim.ie has worked for over 10 years as a software engineer. He has taught software engineering at NUI Maynooth since 2001 and was awarded the inaugural presidential prize for excellence in teaching in 2003, primarily for his work in PBL. His research is in the area of networked computer games.

Brenda Dermody brenda.dermody@dit.ie is a lecturer in visual communications at the Dublin Institute of Technology and a book designer. Her current research interests include theme-based curriculum design and Problem-based Learning.

Roisin Donnelly roisin.donnelly@dit.ie has been working for the past six years in the Learning and Teaching Centre in the Dublin Institute of Technology, where she has a role in the design and delivery of the Postgraduate Certificate, Diploma and Masters in Third Level Learning and Teaching. Her teaching and research interests include Online and Blended Problem and Project-based Learning

Brenda Duggan brenda.duggan@dit.ie is a lecturer in visual communications at the Dublin Institute of Technology. Her current research interest is Problem-based Learning in design education.

Helen Fallon Helen.b.fallon@nuim.ie is Deputy Librarian at National University of Ireland, Maynooth. She is chairperson of the Academic and National Library Training Co-operative (ANLTC). Her research interests include information literacy and Problem-based Learning and creativity in higher education.

Ivan Gibson ivan.gibson@nuigalway.ie is a lecturer in industrial engineering at NUI Galway. His research interests include engineering education and project-based learning.

Bettie Higgs b.higgs@ucc.ie has lectured in Geology in University College Cork since 1987. Since 2002 she has also coordinated activities supporting teaching and learning in the University. She is an associate lecturer for The Open University, and a 2005 Carnegie Scholar.

Peter Kahn peter.kahn@manchester.ac.uk is Teaching Development Officer at the University of Manchester. The role involves having a particular concern for promoting professional development related to teaching and the support of learning. In this capacity he has also acted as Project Manager for a regional programme of staff development that aimed to build capacity for learning based around processes of enquiry. Peter has recently published two books on learning and teaching in mathematics, and has co-edited a book on staff and educational development.

Margaret Leahy mleahy@ted.ie is a lecturer in Speech and Language Pathology and Therapy at the School of Clinical Speech & Language Studies Trinity College Dublin. Her research interests include discourse analysis and education innovations in speech and language therapy.

Ranald Macdonald r.macdonald@shu.ac.uk is Professor of Academic Development in the Learning and Teaching Institute at Sheffield Hallam University and is Co-Director of the Centre for Promoting Learner Autonomy. Ranald is a former Chair of the UK's Staff and Educational Development Association, a Fellowship holder of the organisation and currently Chair of its Research Committee. His research and development interests are wide but currently are focused on the scholarship of academic development, learner autonomy, assessment, plagiarism and Problem-based Learning.

Jacinta McLoughlin jacintamcloughlin@dental.tcd.ie is Director of Dental Studies and Senior Lecturer in Public Dental Health in the Dublin Dental School & Hospital since 2002. The Dublin Dental School & Hospital introduced a PBL curriculum in the mid 1990s.

George Mitchell georgem@cs.nuim.ie lectures at the Department of Computer Science NUI, Maynooth. George was awarded the inaugural Presidential Prize for excellence in teaching in 2003, primarily for his work in PBL. George's teaching and research is in the area of Software Engineering and Evolutionary Computation.

Phil Noone phil.noone@nuigalway.ie is programme director and lecturer at the Centre for Nursing Studies, National University of Ireland, Galway. Her research interest is in well-being and older people.

Ann O’Kelly ann.okelly@nuigalwy.ie lectures part-time at the centre for Nursing Studies NUI, Galway. She is a practitioner member of the Mediator’s Institute of Ireland and has extensive experience of adult education and mediation.

Jackie O’Kelly jokelly@cs.nuim.ie is a course director and lecturer at NUI Maynooth. She is a member of the organising committee for the National RoboCode Competition and has reviewed for PPIJ and ITiCSE conferences. Her research interests are, (i) in the area of speech and language rehabilitation, specifically apraxia and (ii) how students learn, particularly how they solve problems within the computer science discipline.

Geraldine O’Neill geraldine.m.oneill@ucd.ie is a Senior Lecturer in Educational Development in the Centre for Teaching and Learning, School of Education and Lifelong Learning in UCD, Dublin. Her research interests are in the area of Problem-based Learning, curriculum design and assessment practices. She has used PBL with undergraduate Occupational Therapy students and postgraduate students (staff) on a Higher Diploma in University Teaching and Learning.

Karen O’Rourke karen.o'rourke@manchester.ac.uk has been responsible for the investigation, development, implementation and evaluation of appropriate PBL methods and systems in Literary Studies. She was subsequently appointed Senior Curriculum Development Officer, University of Manchester and was at the same time seconded part-time to the Faculty of Humanities Pedagogic Research Centre. Karen has recently been appointed Associate Director of the University’s Centre for Excellence in Enquiry-based Learning.

Esa Poikela esa.poikela@ulapland.fi is a Professor of education at the University of Lapland, Finland. He is a Leader of the ProBell research group at the University of Tampere. His research interests include adult education, learning at work, PBL, evaluation and assessment.

Sari Poikela, sari.poikela@ulapland.fi Sari is a Senior Researcher at the Faculty of Education, University of Lapland, Finland. She has been working with staff development and research projects, especially with PBL at the University of Tampere. Her research interests include adult and higher education, PBL, evaluation and quality assurance.

Siobhan Smyth siobhan.smyth@nuigalway.ie is a lecturer in the Centre for Nursing Studies, at the National University of Ireland, Galway. Her principal teaching and research interests are on the areas of mental health nursing, clinical supervision, medication compliance and enquiry and problem based learning.

Irene Walshe ipwalshe@tcd.ie is a lecturer in Speech and Language Pathology and Therapy at the School of Clinical Speech & Language Studies Trinity College Dublin. Her research interests include discourse analysis and education innovations in speech and language therapy.