10th International Disability Law Summer School

18-22 JUNE 2018

Introduction to the 2018 Programme

In recent years, the Summer School has adopted a general theme. The overall theme of this year's Summer School is intersectionality of gender, disability and age.

The combined effect of discrimination on the basis of disability on women, children, and older persons has had and continues to have devastating consequences for the exercise and enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms in both the public and private spheres around the world.

The 10th International Disability Law Summer School will explore creative advocacy in terms of intersectionality from around the world. It will learn from advocates from social movements, academia, NGOs, policymakers and other stakeholders with different forms of expertise. It will facilitate participants to think in a more inclusive way about all the identities and contexts of all people with disabilities and how we can ensure protection and promotion of human rights and fundamental freedoms, not just in terms of discrimination against persons with disabilities, but also in terms of policies that promote human rights across a range of different environments and contexts.

The proceedings will be highly interactive – including roundtables and conversations between speakers, with plenty space for questions and answers. The proceedings will be video recorded and placed on the Centre's YouTube site.

Day 1: Monday 18 June

About Today

Introduction to the CRPD

Day 1 will provide participants with a general introduction to the CRPD. Leaders from the global disability rights movement will participate in a roundtable discussion and will provide inside knowledge of how the treaty came about as well as sharing their experiences and stories from the negotiation process. This will be of interest to those familiar with the CRPD as well as those who are new to this topic. The keynote address will be delivered by the Chairperson of the CRPD Committee with a response from an Irish perspective. At the end of the day participants will be introduced to the moot court exercise which attendees will take part in on Day 5.

Day 4: Thursday 21 June

About Today

Intersectionality, Non-Discrimination and Social Change

Day 4 begins with a panel discussion about intersectionality in the work of the UN. In this panel, members of UN agencies will discuss how they use intersectional approaches in their work. A panel about the inclusion of disabled people in broader social movements and civil society campaigns follows this discussion. The central idea of this panel is to discuss how campaigns can include all social groups as well as how different social groups can help each other and reinforce solidarity.

A major focus of Day 4 is reproductive justice. This topic is divided into two panels, one for abortion and disability with speakers from different perspectives talking about the implications of access to safe and legal abortion and the rights of persons with disabilities. The other panel is about forced sterilisation where international and comparative perspectives will be discussed.

These includes monitoring the rights of persons with disabilities with the Kenya National Commission on Human Rights (KNCHR) as a representative of organization of Persons with disabilities in line with Article 33(3) of the Convention. Michael was part of a technical team that developed a briefing paper on Article 12 of the CRPD with KNCHR and has also conducted research on legal capacity on behalf of the Mental Disability Advocacy Center. Mr Njenga is also part of a technical committee that is implementing the concluding observations on Kenya by the CRPD Committee.

Charles O'Mahony

Dr. Charles O'Mahony has been Head of the School of Law, NUI Galway since May 2017. He joined the School of Law in 2012. He completed a PhD at the Centre for Disability Law and Policy, NUI Galway entitled "Diversion: A Comparative Study of Law and Policy Relating to Defendants and Offenders with Mental Health Problems and Intellectual Disability". Charles was elected as President of the Irish Association of Law Teachers (IALT) from 2014-2016. He previously worked as Amnesty International Ireland's Legal Officer on its mental health campaign and as a legal researcher for the Law Reform Commission of Ireland. He was awarded a LLM from University College London, a LLM in Public Law from NUI Galway and holds a BA in Law and History and a LLB.

Stephanie Ortoleva

Stephanie Ortoleva is the Founding President and Executive Director of Women Enabled International (WEI), a non-profit organization which works at the intersection of women's rights and disability rights and educates and advocates internationally and regionally for the human rights of women and girls with disabilities, through collaborations with organizations of disabled women worldwide. WEI works at the United Nations and other multilateral organizations to ensure the inclusion of women and girls with disabilities in national, regional and international human rights law, policy and development programming. WEI is recognized as innovative and ground breaking and serves as a prime resource for disabled women's rights advocates globally. Under Stephanie's leadership WEI has expanded and now has a staff of nine and a growing budget. At WEI, she manages the organization, supervises the staff, engages in fund raising, and leads the conceptualization, design and implementation of its work and special projects, including WEI's innovative accountABILITY Toolkit, among other projects. As a woman with a disability herself she brings the development, academic and legal perspectives to her work as well as her personal experience as a woman with a disability. Prior to founding WEI, Stephanie served as an attorney and human rights officer at the U.S. Department of State, where she was awarded the prestigious Franklin Award in 2009 for her outstanding work on human rights matters. Recently, Women's E-News recognized Stephanie as a leader for women's rights for the 21st Century in 2016 and Hofstra University School of Law recognized her as an Outstanding Women in Law awardee for 2017. Stephanie has authored numerous scholarly publications and policy papers regarding women's rights, disability rights, sexual and reproductive rights, access to justice, violence against women, conflict and post-conflict situations, and rule of law. She is the former founding Co-Chair of the American Society of International Law's International Disability Rights Interest Group, serves on the American Bar Association's Commission on Disability Rights and serves on the Board of Directors of several women's rights and disability rights organizations. She graduated from Hofstra University School of Law with outstanding honors, served on the Hofstra Law Review and is admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court and in the State of New York.

Andrea Parra

Andrea Parra is an attorney, legal activist, translator and experiential trainer. She is the Director of Advocacy at CREA. She holds a law degree from the Universidad de los Andes in Bogotá, Colombia and an LLM in American Law from Boston University. She is admitted to practice in the state of New York and in Colombia. Between 2016 and 2017 she was the interim Practitioner-in-Residence of the Immigrant Justice Clinic of the Washington College of Law at American University. Between 2011 and 2016, she was the Director of the Action Program for Equality and Social Inclusion (PAIIS), a human rights law clinic at the Universidad de los Andes that engages in legal and political advocacy against discrimination based on disability, gender identity and sexual orientation. She was an adjunct professor at the same law school between 2009 and 2014. Prior to joining PAIIS, she worked as a senior staff attorney at Women's Link Worldwide, where she directed the Gender Justice Observatory and worked on projects related to migrant women and implementation of international human rights standards. Between 2001 and 2006 she worked as staff attorney and supervisor of the Domestic Violence Unit at the Northwest Immigrant Rights Project in Seattle, U.S. Since 2014, she has been a training associate with Training for Change an organization that has developed an experiential methodology of training that helps groups stand up more effectively for justice, peace and the environment. She has trained in several countries and in various cities of Colombia and the U.S. She is also a translator and interpreter on social justice issues including the book Gender Stereotyping, Transnational Legal Perspectives by Professors Rebecca Cook and Simone Cusack.

Ricardo Pla Cordero

Ricardo Pla Cordero works at the IRC as Risk Mitigation and Inclusion Advisor. As development and humanitarian worker he has designed, implemented, monitored and evaluated rights-based approach programmes in humanitarian crises such as the Typhoon Haiyan in the Philippines, the earthquakes in Nepal in 2015 and the Syrian Crisis, analysing how responses ensure equitable access for persons with disabilities to essential humanitarian aid and promote dignity, safety, participation and accountability. Mr. Pla Cordero collaborates also in the development of global policy and guidance to promote the rights of persons with disabilities, such as the Charter and IASC Guidelines on Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities in Humanitarian Action, UNICEF's guidance on Including Children with disabilities in humanitarian action, and the Humanitarian Inclusion Standards for older people and people with disabilities.

Gerard Quinn

Gerard Quinn was the founding director of the CDLP. He now holds a Wallenberg chair at the Wallenberg Institute for Human Rights & International Humanitarian Law (University Lund, Sweden) and a research chair at the University of Leeds (UK). Called to the Irish Bar in 1983, he holds a masters (LL.M.) and doctorate in law (S.J.D.) from Harvard Law School. His specialisation is international and comparative disability law and policy. He led the delegation of Rehabilitation International during the UN Working Group that elaborated the basis for the new Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. He has worked in the European Commission (as a civil servant), and held a number of posts such as Director of Research for the Irish Government's Law Reform Commission and Vice President of the European Committee of Social Rights (Council of Europe). He has sat on various advisory boards dealing with disability law and policy issues such as the Commonwealth Secretariat, SOROS/OSI (Washington, DC), Disability Rights Fund (Boston, MA), European Foundation Centre Consortium on Disability (Brussels), European Coalition for Community Living (London), and Interights (London). In January 2012 President Michael D. Higgins appointed Professor Quinn to the Republic of Ireland's Council of State.

Stella Reicher

Stella Reicher (LLM from the University of São Paulo Law School in the field of Human Rights) is a partner of Szazi Bechara Storto Rosa and Figueiredo Lopes Lawyers and teaches at the Catholic University of São Paulo. She built her practice working on projects and initiatives aimed at promoting and ensuring human rights, and more specifically, the rights of persons with disabilities, as well as providing legal advice to non-profit organizations, including DPOs, businesses and public bodies in structuring and implementing policies, programs and projects of their interest. Mrs. Reicher has worked with Brazilian DPOs to organize the first civil society report on the implementation of the CRPD in Brazil. Anne Scott

Professor Anne Scott is Vice President for Equality and Diversity, NUI Galway. She has worked as an academic and academic leader in the Scottish, Irish and the English Higher Education Systems. She held the post of Head of the School of Nursing and Human Sciences, Dublin City University (2000-2006) where she led the development of BSc, MSc and PhD programmes in the school, in addition to founding and developing a vibrant culture of research and scholarship.

In February 2006 Professor Scott was appointed Deputy President and Registrar of DCU, a post which she held until late 2012. During this time she led many initiatives across DCU including a review of the academic promotions process; the development of the e-learning roadmap; and the graduate attributes project for the university. She has a proven track record of transformational leadership in academic environments in both Ireland and the UK, working at senior levels, to bring balance to strategic decision making and insight into the organisational culture and concerns of colleagues.

Professor Scott is an active mentor for the Aurora women only leadership development programme in the UK; she was recognised by the Women's Executive Network (WXN) through the Ireland's Most Powerful Women: Top 25 Awards for her leadership in public service; she has also mentored emerging women leaders and high potentials via the WXN.

M. Laura Serra

Dr. M. Laura Serra is a Research Associate in the Centre for Disability Law and Policy at the National University of Ireland, Galway (NUIG). She holds a Ph.D. in Human Rights from Charles III University of Madrid (Spain), a Master's degree in Advanced Studies in Human Rights from the same University and a Law degree from the National University of Mar del Plata (Argentina).

Laura's main research is about women with disabilities, equality and non-discrimination, with a strong focus on intersectionality. She also focuses on sexual and reproductive rights of women with disabilities. She has worked on several disability and human rights research projects involving strategic litigation, policy making, legislative drafting, among other topics in Latin America, Europe and the MENA region. She has also provided support to one of the members of the UN Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities on the general comment on article 6, women with disabilities.

Since 2016, Laura has worked as an individual researcher for the Women's Human Rights Institute (Canada) on a research and advocacy project for a thematic report of the UN Working Group on Discrimination Against Women in Law and Practice (UNWGDW) on good practices in addressing discrimination and promoting women's self-empowerment. Before she joined the CDLP she was working on several research projects related to disability studies as a research assistant at Charles III University of Madrid (Spain) and as a minor lecturer leading workshops and working with the leading group of the human rights legal clinic, following cases about disability rights.

In Argentina, Laura worked in the governmental sector as a legal advocate at the Department for the Promotion of Equality and Prevention of Discrimination of Mar del Plata County Council and in academia, as part of a disability research group at the National University of Mar del Plata as a research assistant. Laura is a committed feminist and is very interested in the promotion of human rights for women with disabilities of different identities and social environments, applying intersectionality as a paradigm shift in the legal field.

Ciara Smyth

Dr. Ciara Smyth researches in the area of international, European and Irish refugee law and she is particularly interested in how refugee law and human rights law interact. For the past number of years her research focus has been on the Common European Asylum System and her book, European Asylum Law and the Rights of the Child (Routledge, 2014), explores the extent to which the European regional system of refugee protection is consistent with the rights of the child. She is currently undertaking a comparative analysis of international and regional norms concerning the immigration detention of children. Before joining NUI Galway, Ciara worked for a number of non-governmental and intergovernmental organisations in Ireland and abroad, including the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. She continues to play an active role in civil society and in the influencing of public policy. From 2012-2015 she was a member - and variously Vice Chair and Acting Chair - of the Board of Directors of the Irish Refugee Council.

In 2014 she was nominated by the Minister of Justice and Equality, Ms. Francis Fitzgerald, to the McMahon Working Group, which was tasked with recommending improvements to the Irish asylum process. In 2016 she appeared before the House of Lords EU Home Affairs Sub-Committee to give expert evidence on the situation of unaccompanied minors in the EU. She also regularly contributes to media discussions on matters relating to immigration, asylum and human rights in Ireland and the UK. Ciara holds a PhD from Leiden University, the Netherlands, for which she was awarded a Max Van Der Stoel Human Rights award in 2013; an LL.M in Human Rights (with distinction) from Queen's University Belfast; and an LL.B and B.A. from NUI Galway. Ciara teaches two undergraduate courses, Public International Law and International Protection of Human Rights, and two postgraduate courses, Immigration Law and Refugee Law, the latter at the Irish Centre for Human Rights.

Magda Szarota

Magda Szarota is a disabled woman with hidden impairment, who for years has been trying to bridge the world of people with disabilities and non-disabled people with the means of activism, social science and photography. Co-founded first association of women with disabilities in Poland (ONE.pl, 2004). She co-created: first guidebook for women with disabilities under the patronage of the Government Plenipotentiary for Equal Status of Women and Men; interactive portal for women with disability and their allies/allies; a manifesto of rights of women and girls with disabilities in the EU and together with Women Enable International an alternative report for the UN on the situation of women with disabilities in Poland. Magda has been active in propagating Poland's ratification of the UN CRPD (expert bodies, social campaigns, media appearances). In recognition of her advocacy work she was among a few chosen representatives of the Polish NGOs to be invited to the ceremony of ratification by the Polish President of the UN CRPD. Since 2006, together with Monika Mazur-Rafał, she co-creates and manages an award-winning non-governmental organization: Humanity in Action Poland (HIA Poland), which is a part of an transatlantic human rights network Humanity in Action based in 6 other countries that educates and supports young activists and leaders around the world. Magda co-created also the Ashoka Foundation's Academy for Young Social Entrepreneurs in war-torn Nepal (2005). Currently she works on a dual doctorate at the Polish Academy of Sciences and Lancaster University (UK) about the social consequences of activism of women with disabilities. She is a recipient of number of scholarships including: Yale University, Ashoka Foundation, Kosciuszko Foundation and is a winner of the Servas International prize for activists.

She was a Lecturer on Law and Social Studies at the Committee on Degrees in Social Studies at Harvard University. She was also a Visiting Professor at the Department of Law at Carleton University, Canada and she has lectured at numerous Universities all around the world. She has written on freedom of expression, freedom of religion, harm to self, human dignity, postmodernism and the law, as well as on issues of discrimination on the grounds of religion and disability. She is currently working on a project on the concept of human dignity and on a comparison of US and EU Employment Discrimination Law.

Melissa Upreti

Melissa Upreti (LL.B.) (LL.M.) is a human rights lawyer and women's rights advocate who has spent nearly two decades advocating for the recognition and fulfillment of women's rights through the use of national, regional, and international law and mechanisms. She has led fact-finding missions, undertaken strategic litigation, built the capacity of civil society organizations, published numerous articles and reports, and advised governments. Ms. Upreti is a Fellow in the University of Toronto Law Faculty's International Reproductive and Sexual Health Law Program and currently Senior Director of Program and Global Advocacy at the Center for Women's Global Leadership at Rutgers University in the United States. At CWGL, she oversees and provides strategic guidance on the development and implementation of program initiatives and advocacy strategies at the intersection of macro-economic policy, peace and security, and women's human rights. She is also a Special Procedures Mandate-holder on the Working Group on discrimination against women in law and in practice, established by the Human Rights Council.

Kieran Walsh

Kieran Walsh is Professor of Ageing & Public Policy and Director of the Irish Centre for Social Gerontology, National University of Ireland Galway. Kieran has extensive experience in interdisciplinary social gerontology and life-course research. He has played a leading role in the development of international multi-site and interdisciplinary research programmes. Kieran's research interests and expertise focus on: social exclusion in later life; the relative nature of disadvantage in cross-national contexts; place and life-course transitions; and informal and formal infrastructures of care. Kieran is also Chair of the European COST Action CA15122 on 'Reducing Old-Age Social Exclusion' (ROSEnet – www.rosenetcost.com), which has over 140 members from 39 different countries. With objectives that address critical gaps in research, policy, and international interdisciplinary research capacity, ROSEnet aims to overcome fragmentation in conceptual innovation on old-age exclusion across the life course, in order to address the research-policy disconnect and tackle social exclusion amongst older people.

Quinn, G. & O'Mahony, C., Disability Law and Policy: An Analysis of the UN Convention (Clarius Press 2017)

This book undertakes a multidisciplinary examination of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. The rights-based perspective on disability is a relatively new lens through which disability law and policy is considered. This is despite the fact that persons with disabilities are often described as the world's largest minority. There are approximately 1 billion persons with disabilities in the world (15 percent of the world's population). This book is an edited volume of essays that undertakes a multidisciplinary examination of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

Part 1 of the edited collection focuses on disability and intersectionality; part 2 addresses the on going debate about the meaning of Article 12 the right to equal recognition before the law. The chapters contained in part 3 go on to address the emerging discourse on the right to liberty as contained in Article 14 of the CRPD and the barriers facing persons with mental health problems. Part 4 of the collection examines the right to live independently and to be included in the community. The themes of the right to inclusive education and employment for persons with disabilities are explored in parts 5 and 6 of the collection. The final part of the book part 7 examines how the CRPD is being implemented regionally and in a number of jurisdictions.

Disability Law and Policy: An Analysis of the UN Convention has evolved from an event entitled Global PhD and Researchers Colloquium on Disability Law and Policy organised by the Centre for Disability Law and Policy, NUI Galway. The Colloquium was organised in conjunction with the Burton Blatt Institute, University of Syracuse and the University of Haifa, Israel.

Quinn, G. & Arnardottir, O., The United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities: European and Scandinavian Perspectives (Brill, 2008).

The International Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities is the first human rights treaty adopted by the United Nations in the 21st century. It seeks to secure the equal and effective enjoyment of human rights for the estimated 650 million persons with disabilities in the world. It does so by tailoring general human rights norms to their circumstances. It reflects and advances the shift away from welfare to rights in the context of disability. The Convention itself represents a mix between non-discrimination and other substantive human rights and gives practical effect to the idea that all human rights are indivisible and interdependent. This collection of essays examines these developments from the global, European and Scandinavian perspectives and the challenge of transposing its provisions into national law. It marks the coming of age of disability as a core human rights concern.

Flynn, E., From Rhetoric to Action Implementing the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (Cambridge University Press, 2011).

This book contains a global comparative study of implementation and monitoring mechanisms for national disability strategies. It comprises a comparative study that was conducted at international, regional, and comparative country levels and that highlights critical success factors in implementing disability strategies or action plans worldwide. It explores emerging synergies between what is required to implement principles of international law contained in the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and what it is possible to achieve through national policy and systems development. A number of critical success factors for implementing and monitoring strategies are identified, including leadership from government and civil society, participation of disabled people in implementation and monitoring, transparency and accountability in reporting on progress, independent monitoring and external review, and the ability to measure progress with indicators of disability equality.

Flynn, E., Disabled Justice? Access to Justice and the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (Ashgate Publishing, 2015).

This book analyses the experience of people with disabilities through the entire justice system, from making a complaint, to investigation, and through the court/tribunal process. It also considers the participation of people with disabilities in a variety of roles in the justice system - as witness, defendant, complainant, plaintiff, lawyer, judge and juror. More broadly, it also critically examines the subtle barriers of access to justice which might exist in a given society - including barriers to grassroots disability advocacy, legal education and training, the right to vote and the right to stand for election which may apply to people with disabilities. The book is international and comparative in scope with a focus primarily on examples of legal practice and justice systems in common law countries. The work will be of interest to scholars working in the areas of human rights, equality and non-discrimination, disability rights activists and legal professionals who work with people with disabilities to achieve access to justice.

Quinn G., de Paor A., Blanck P., Genetic Discrimination – Transatlantic perspectives on the case for a European-level legal response (Routledge, 2015)

This book explores the different forms and potential uses of genetic testing. Drawing together leading experts in disability law, bioethics, health law and a range of related fields, it highlights the ethical and legal challenges arising as a result of emerging and rapidly advancing genetic science. On examining transatlantic perspectives on the matter, chapters in the book ask whether the US Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act (GINA) is proving to be an effective tool in addressing the issue of genetic discrimination and alleviating fears of discrimination. The book also reviews what insights may be gained from GINA within employment and health insurance contexts, and asks how the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD) may impact similar debates within the European Union. The book focuses particularly on the legislative and policy framework in the European Union, with an emphasis on the gaps in protection and the scope for specific legislative action in this area. This book will be of great interest to scholars and students of discrimination law, bioethics and disability law, and will be of considerable use to legal practitioners, medical practitioners and policy-makers in this area.

Power, A., Lord, E.J. & de Franco, A.S., Active Citizenship and Disability: Implementing the Personalisation of Support (Cambridge University Press, 2013).

This book provides an international comparative study of the implementation of disability rights law and policy focused on the emerging principles of self-determination and personalisation. It explores how these principles have been enshrined in the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and how different jurisdictions have implemented them to enable meaningful engagement and participation by persons with disabilities in society. The philosophy of 'active citizenship' underpinning the Convention – that all citizens should (be able to) actively participate in the community – provides the core focal point of this book, which grounds its analysis in exploring how this goal has been imagined and implemented across a range of countries. The case studies examine how different jurisdictions have reformed disability law and policy and reconfigured how support is administered and funded to ensure maximum choice and independence is accorded to people with disabilities.
